Aims and objectives:

The workshop which is being organised in partnership with Walker Morris LLP is designed to explore the opportunities for local government to benefit from energy efficiency measures across the whole of its estate. In 2009 buildings accounted for about 43% of all U.K. carbon emissions.

According to the Carbon Trust the energy consumption of local authorities is estimated to be at least 26 billion kWh per year. This results in annual CO₂ emissions of more than 6.9 Mt and corresponds to energy expenditure in the order of £750 million per year.

Energy is one of the largest controllable overheads in most local authority buildings so there are many opportunities to make savings. With or without financial support from Central Government, local authorities can achieve a great deal in improving energy efficiency and saving money.

The workshop will look at:

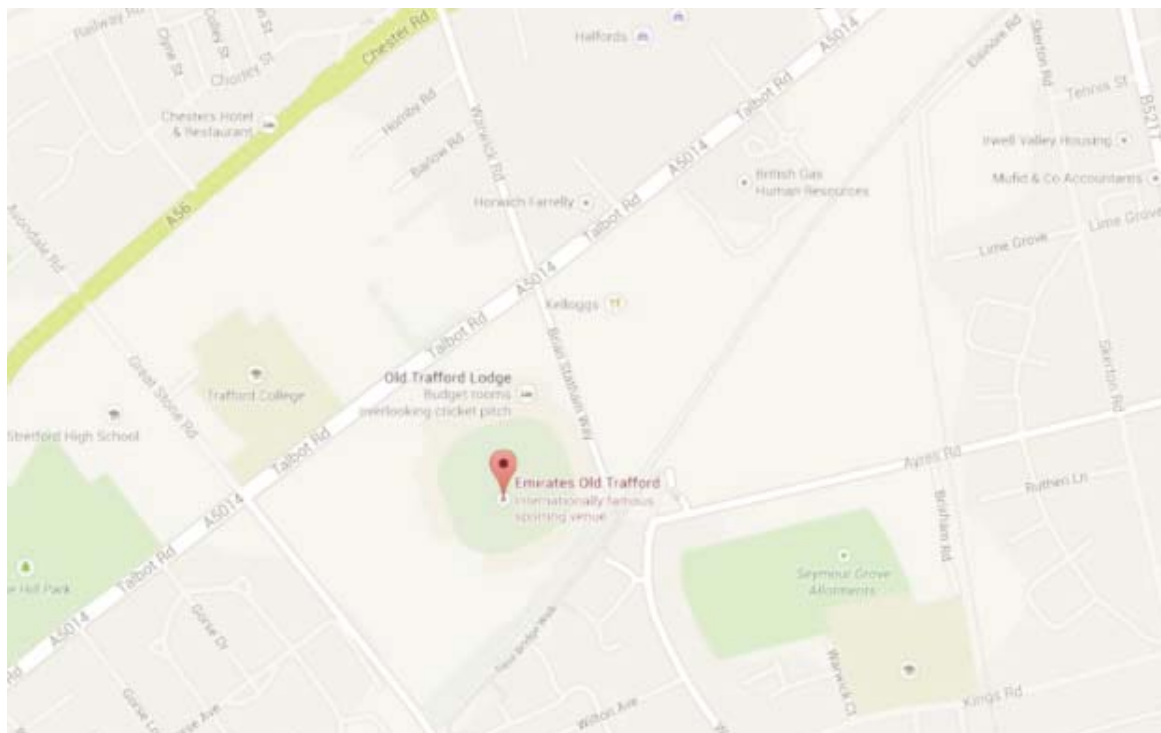

- Examples of best practice across local government
- Different means of financing projects
- Contract management and contractual issues
- Managing risks

There will be an opportunity to hear from legal, financial and insurance experts and to contribute to group discussion and feedback.
