Doing local politics in Scotland

Councillors, officers and communities

This report contributes to current debates over the future of local democracy in Scotland. It draws attention to what it takes to do local politics, and to the everyday practices of local decision-making. What is it that local councillors do when they go about their work? How do officers understand their role and engage within and beyond the council? And how do communities connect with local councils and interact with councillors and officers? Having a better understanding of these questions provides us with the necessary grasp of the everyday practices of local politics with which to formulate alternative visions for the future.

Bricks-Mortar-Money: Property investment as a potential means of securing an additional and sustainable source of revenue

A new report by APSE and the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA), shows that an increasing number of local authorities are acquiring property for investment purposes to plug the funding gaps created by ongoing austerity in local government. The report shows that significant changes to funding for local authorities has led to many councils searching for new sources of revenue to supplement their income and balance the books. This increase in property investment highlights that councils throughout the UK are concerned that they will potentially be left with a shortfall in their revenue budgets, on top of the reduction in real terms that they are already experiencing. Building homes, creating communities

Ensuring councils provide innovative solutions to meeting housing need

Published by APSE and written and researched by the Town and County Planning Association, this report finds that UK councils are becoming increasingly unable to meet demands for affordable housing and 98% now describe their need as either 'severe' or 'moderate' with only 1% claiming that their need is not substantial. The survey of 166 local authorities in Britain highlights the pressure on councils to meet the growing demand for affordable housing due to a lack of new homes being built and that many of those that are being built are not affordable to those in need.

Redefining neighbourhoods:

A future beyond austerity?

Since 2010/11, neighbourhood services have been the hardest hit of all local government services, taking a shrinking share of a shrinking budget. Over this period, the worst hit neighbourhood services in England have had spending cut in half. Many have seen cuts of at least a quarter and the most deprived local authorities in England have seen the biggest fails. This hard hitting new report by APSE and the New Policy Institute (NPI) explores the impact of austerity on neighbourhood services, and warns of the consequences of this continuing downward trajectory in funding which risks falling to a 60-year low.

A future beyond austerity?

Redefining Neighbourhoods: Beyond Austerity

Available soon on the APSE website

Redefining neighbourhoods: Beyond austerity will look at how local authority frontline strategies need to evolve as funding diminishes and social care needs increase. The programme will also bring to life investment strategies that lead to a more self-sufficient and sustainable future.

Louise update

On Saturday 29th July at 6:26am, Isaac Robert David Melville was born two weeks early by caesarean section, with a healthy weight of 7lbs and 12ozs. Louise and Craig are doing well.

I have brought a card for the advisory group to sign if you'd like to.
