Creating Local Systems of Employability Support

Neighbourhood services poll Suration on behalf of APSE

A new survey has found that Chancellor Philip Hammond is out of step with local voters, with over three quarters of the public calling for more money to be spent locally, rather than on super infrastructure schemes. The survey, conducted by Suration on behalf of the Association for Public Service Excellence (APSE), found that the vast majority of the public want to see more of their taxes spent in the local area. The survey suggests that the public would welcome localised infrastructure investment.

Work it out: Creating Local Systems of Employability Support

Councils have already started to develop their own innovative responses to the challenge of employability. However, as the Work and Health Programme comes into operation, there is a danger of missed opportunities, and councils could offer much more if given the tools and incentives to do so. In fact, with the right support, local authorities could start to form the new frontline for employability support in a way that is far more efficient and locally-sensitive than national programmes. This collaborative report from APSE and NLGN scrutinises the current place of local authorities in tackling unemployment.

Promoting Excellence

Partnering with ITN Productions, APSE has produced an hour-long programme for our YouTube channel

The programme keenly examines the role that local authorities play in building sustainable communities. Drawing upon ITN's 60-year heritage and expertise in storytelling, 'Promoting Excellence' aims to create a greater understanding of the processes, problems and solutions within a large number of frontline services.
